Circle of Concern Process

- 1. Facilitator: Make sure that all chairs are in a circle. No desks/tables should be in-between those participating. Make sure the student is to the right of the facilitator, so they can reflect after the feedback has been given.
- 2. Facilitator: Thank everyone for coming and participating. Thank student for taking a risk and working with us. State the intended time commitment for the circle.
- 3. Explain the ground rules for the circle process:
 - *Talking piece
 - *Clockwise
 - *Nobody can speak unless they have the talking piece
 - *You may pass
 - *Listening is key
 - *I am the facilitator, but I am not here to fix the problem. I merely hold the space for us to work together to seek positive solutions.
 - *Confidentiality- Pass the form around and get signatures.
- 4. Facilitator poses first round question: “Let’s begin by stating what each of us hopes to accomplish by participating in this circle today.”
- 5. Facilitator poses second round question: “We are here today to offer support and feedback for _____ (the student). We will begin by giving _____ (the student) some feedback about behaviors that we see that are concerning us.”
 - *When it comes to the student, have them reflect what they heard and what they think about it. They may then also answer questions that came up as the talking piece went around the circle.
- 6. Facilitator poses third round question: “Please describe what positive attributes _____ (the student) has and talk to the young person about how you hope they will use these assets in the future.” Offer words of encouragement, etc...at this time.
 - *When it comes to the student, have them reflect what they heard and what they think about it.
- 7. Agreements: Facilitator sets the talking piece in the center so the group can talk about a plan for improving the situation. The facilitator writes the agreements on the sheet.
- 8. Evaluation form: Have everyone who participated fill out an evaluation form and return them to the facilitator. Set up a time/date for a follow up circle, if one is needed.
- 9. Thank all for participating. ☺
